Effective Broad Oak Experiential Learning

Teams are complex machines, so it is no surprise that they can occasionally malfunction or need re-alignment. Every once in a while all teams need an MOT, so of course, you want to ensure that your team building event is as effective as possible.

In order to achieve this it is Broad Oaks belief that these exercises be carried out outside of the workplace in an environment that will allow the participants to forget about the day to day issues that they encounter and focus on the basic fundamental problems, i.e. Communication, trust, conflict etc

We believe the key is to ensure that your event has a positive effect on the morale, motivation, confidence and effectiveness of the team and its individual members. At Broad Oak we can offer many different team building exercises and activities, all designed to get your team working better and handling the day-to-day challenges in the workplace together.

There is no 'right' kind of team building activity, only the one that's right for you. On the next page of this brochure is a guide to help you decide which activity would be of benefit to you and your team.

Effective debriefing

To fully appreciate what is to be gained from our team building exercises and what you can learn from them, after each activity delegates are debriefed. One of the most popular systems we use is 'RED, AMBER, GREEN.'

Red - what did not go so well and do we need to stop doing?

Amber - What went well and should be continued?

Green - What do we need to start doing?

“The purpose of the day was a team building exercise, which was achieved and thoroughly enjoyed by every member that took part. The feedback I received from other departments within our organisation that had visited Broad Oak events was very good, which is why I decided to book our team there for a day out. It was a real first time experience for us all. It was great fun!”
